January 7, 2016

The Honorable Paul Ryan Speaker U.S. House of Representatives Washington, DC 20515

The Honorable Nancy Pelosi Minority Leader U.S. House of Representatives Washington, DC 20515

Dear Speaker Ryan and Leader Pelosi:

The House may soon consider H.R. 1927, the "Fairness in Class Action Litigation and Furthering Asbestos Claim Transparency Act of 2015." Section 2 of this bill would effectively eviscerate consumer, antitrust, employment and civil rights class actions. The undersigned groups write in strong opposition to Sec. 2 of this bill.

While a few modifications have been made to the bill since it was first introduced, what has not changed is the requirement that every person in a class have "an injury of the same type and scope" before the case can proceed. (The word "scope" replaced the word "extent" found in the bill's earlier version, but this is a distinction without a difference.) Class members must already meet common requirements spelled out in F.R.C.P. 23, which requires that the class as a whole have the same type of injury stemming from the same unlawful conduct. However, a new requirement that every individual in a class have an injury of the same "scope," proof of which must be established before the case can even proceed as a class, will sound the death knell for most class actions.

Classes inherently include a range of affected individuals, and virtually never does every member of the class suffer the same "scope" of injury from the same wrongdoing. Certainly, many civil rights, discrimination and employment class actions, including cases involving refusals by companies to properly pay workers, would not satisfy these criteria. It is notable that during the bill's June 24 House Judiciary Committee mark-up, Rep. John Conyers offered an amendment to exempt civil rights cases from the bill's reach. In a party-line vote, the committee refused.

There are far too many other examples to list here of recent, important class actions that would fail to meet this bill's "scope of injury" requirement and that never would have gone forward under H.R. 1927. However, it is worth mentioning a few examples. They include recent successful class actions brought over bank and credit card abuses, where the same corporate policy resulted in customers being cheated out of various amounts of money; home and mortgage loan abuses; antitrust violations, where class actions have recovered millions for small businesses in varying amounts from illegal price-fixing cartels; illegal for-profit colleges practices; refusals by companies to properly pay workers; many types of product defects; and denial of insurance benefits. Business owners financially injured by the BP oil spill all had different losses but all were financially injured by the same corporate misconduct. Many more examples could be cited.

It is for these reasons that federal courts have rejected such a "commonality in damages" requirement for class certification. As Judge Posner explained, a "commonality in damages" requirement:

[W]ould drive a stake through the heart of the class action device. . . [T]he fact that damages are not identical across all class members should not preclude class certification. Otherwise defendants would be able to escape liability for tortious harms of enormous aggregate magnitude but so widely distributed as not to be remediable in individual suits.

In addition, by considering this bill now, Congress is circumventing the process that Congress itself established for promulgation of federal court rules under the Rules Enabling Act, bypassing both the Judicial Conference of the United States and the U.S. Supreme Court. In fact, the Judicial Conference already has an Advisory Committee on Civil Rules, which is currently meeting to discuss possible changes to Rule 23. Interference with the proper federal court rules process is reckless and irresponsible, particularly when this proposal is so damaging to victims.

Class action lawsuits are among the most important tools to enable harmed, cheated and violated individuals and small businesses to hold large corporations and institutions accountable and deter future misconduct. Under H.R. 1927, federal courts will be forced to deny class certification to important, worthy classes of aggrieved consumers, employees and small businesses. We urge you to oppose H.R. 1927, the the "Fairness in Class Action Litigation and Furthering Asbestos Claim Transparency Act of 2015."

Sincerely,

Alliance for Justice

American Antitrust Institute

American Association for Justice

American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees

Americans for Financial Reform

Asbestos Disease Awareness Organization

Autistic Self Advocacy Network

Caney Fork Headwaters Association

Center for Effective Government

Center for Justice & Democracy

Center For Responsible Lending

Center for Science in the Public Interest

Center for Study of Responsive Law

Committee to Support the Antitrust Laws

Consortium for Citizens with Disabilities Rights TF

Consumer Action

Consumer Federation of America

Consumers for Auto Reliability and Safety

Consumers Union

Consumer Watchdog

Cornucopia Network/NJ/TN Chapter

Cumberland Countians for Ecojustice

D.C. Consumer Rights Coalition

Demand Progress

Disability Rights Education & Defense Fund

Earthjustice

Economic Policy Institute

Essential Information

EWG Action Fund

Food & Water Watch

Home Owners for Better Building

Homeowners Against Deficient Dwellings

Impact Fund

Kentucky Equal Justice Center

Law Foundation of Silicon Valley

Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights

Madison Area Bus Advocates

Main Street Alliance

MFY Legal Services, Inc.

NAACP

National Association of Consumer Advocates

National Consumer Law Center (on behalf of its low income clients)

National Consumers League

National Consumer Voice for Quality Long-Term Care

National Council on Independent Living

National Disability Rights Network

National Down Syndrome Congress

National Employment Law Project

National Employment Lawyers Association

National Fair Housing Alliance

National Immigration Law Center

Network for Environmental & Economic Responsibility Of United Church of Christ

New Solutions: A Journal of Environmental and Occupational Health Policy

9to5, National Association of Working Women

Pleasant Hill Community Church/UCC

Protect All Children's Environment

Public Citizen

Reinvestment Partners

SC Appleseed Legal Justice Center

Science and Environmental Health Network

Sciencecorps

Southern Poverty Law Center

Texas Watch

The Arc of the United States

U.S. PIRG

Woodstock Institute

Workplace Fairness